Outcry after taxi driver posts photo of breastfeeding mum

Police look into incident involving passengers as netizens condemn such disrespectful behaviour

Naomi Ng

Police are looking into an incident in which a taxi driver posted online a secretly taken photo of a passenger feeding her baby.

Hong Kong's health minister also urged residents to respect breastfeeding mothers as the post triggered a public outcry.

The male driver posted the picture on a Facebook community group on Saturday with the caption: "Seriously, is this for real?"

The post, which has since been deleted, sparked a backlash from internet users, many of whom criticised him for what they said was disrespectful behaviour.

Police said they were looking into the incident and urged anyone with relevant information to contact them as soon as possible.

"The driver should not have intruded on someone's privacy in such a way, and should have respected the breastfeeding mother and given her space," Secretary for Food and Health Dr Ko Wing-man said yesterday.

He said it was important for Hongkongers to adopt the right attitude in understanding the needs of breastfeeding mothers, and that restaurants, shopping malls and public transport operators should show special consideration.

Jannie Leung Hoi-ting, chairwoman of the Hong Kong Breastfeeding Mothers' Association, said she hoped the incident would raise awareness of the difficulties faced by new mothers.

"When babies are hungry, they need to eat, so mothers should be able to breastfeed anywhere, any time. It's a very natural thing to do," Leung said.

The Privacy Commissioner for Personal Data said it would not comment on individual cases, but believed the incident was a matter of personal conduct rather than being related to the implementation of the CCTV trial scheme.

The watchdog encouraged anyone who thought their personal data had been violated to make a complaint.

Anyone with information about the case can call police on 28605012.

In June, a ferry company launched the city's first breastfeeding station on public transport. More than 30 corporations and 60 restaurants across Hong Kong have pledged support for a campaign to provide breastfeeding facilities in offices and public spaces.

It is unclear how the taxi driver took the photo from the dashboard of the car. Some taxis in Hong Kong are equipped with closed-circuit television systems to resolve any disputes between drivers and passengers.

The cameras are part of a trial scheme to address complaints about poor service among some drivers, but have raised concerns over passenger privacy.

Drivers are required to notify passengers when they are entering a CCTV-equipped cab.

Cabbie drives into breastfeeding storm

Police are asking witnesses to step forward in an incident involving a taxi driver, who may have breached privacy laws by taking and uploading photos of a mother breastfeeding her baby inside his cab.

The taxi driver uploaded a video of a passenger breastfeeding her baby.

The pictures the driver, surnamed Chow, posted on Facebook early Saturday triggered a backlash. In the photos, a mother can be seen breastfeeding her baby, with her face and breasts clearly visible. Chow removed the photos after criticism from netizens, with some fellow taxi drivers calling him "a disgrace to the industry".

The Police Cyber Security and Technology Crime Bureau is following up the incident and trying to locate the culprit driver.

Such incidents are rare in Hong Kong and police are studying relevant laws. "If members of the public have any information provide on the case, please contact the police promptly," a police spokesman said.

The Office of the Privacy Commissioner for Personal Data not comment on the case but called upon those who felt they had been invaded to lodge a complaint.

Collection and compilation of personal data fall under the Personal Data (Privacy) Ordinance and the privacy commissioner said the action was intentional, and the targeted person – the mother – can be identified, the spokesman added.

"It is disrespectful to personal privacy to film the breastfeeding process without the mother's consent," Secretary for Food and Health Ko Wing-man said yesterday. "He further trod on her privacy by distributing the information online."

Ko said the government has made efforts to promote breastfeeding in the past two years, with some shopping malls providing transport facilities having set up baby-care rooms, which are found in certain government departments.

But he admitted the government could do more.

Mobile apps with "call-blocking" function - collecting user's personal data

APPS MAY HAVE YOUR NUMBER

Some three billion private telephone numbers have been compromised by call-filtering apps, including those of Chief Executive Leung Chun-ying and Chief Secretary Carrie Lam Cheng Yuet-ngor, FactWire reported.

The investigative news agency said three mobile apps for identifying spam calls – CM Security, Truecaller and Sync.Me – may breach privacy. They are suspected to have collected and integrated their users' contact list for a database, which allows app users to input a phone number to identify its owner.

Even those who did not download the apps are affected, as their identities could be revealed accidentally by their friends who have the apps and their contacts.

Results from FactWire's test showed Hong Kong's top two officials could be traced with their mobile number on Truecaller, a product of a US-listed company whose main holding company is from China, and the Swedish-developed CM Security. Nearly all former and current lawmakers' mobile numbers also appeared on the two mobile apps.

Sync.Me, which is developed by an Israeli company, integrates the social media accounts to phone numbers, including IT-sector lawmaker Charles Mok, who has his mobile phone number merged with his Facebook, Google and LinkedIn profiles, the report said.

Such information of some other lawmakers, including Raymond Chan Chi-chuen, could be accessed only if app users pay a subscription. All three apps are free to download from app stores and have been downloaded 200 million times.

Privacy Commissioner for Personal Data Stephen Wong Kai-yi said the watchdog will look into the matter if it has reasonable grounds to believe the apps have violated the law. But he said it will not comment on individual cases before understanding the apps and their operation.

Barrister Albert Luk Wai-hung told The Standard that users who unintentionally provide their friends' phone number may not have violated the law, as they did not do it on purpose.

He said the three app developers are unlikely to have violated the law, unless they put the data to other places which are not stated in the terms and conditions that require users' agreement when signing up for the apps.

Luk also said it may be difficult for the privacy watchdog to enforce the law, as the developers are not Hong Kong-based. YUPINA NG

手機App接收用戶通訊錄，整合成數據資料庫放於其他用戶「搜號碼人」，估計涉30億個電話號碼被公開，部分款式更被編碼與社交帳號連結，遭洩露者包括特首梁振英、政務司司長林鄭月娥等名人。科技業界直言難防，但法律界指難以追究。

《通訊社》昨報導，由中國開發的移動通訊App CM Security (WhatsApp) 及Truecaller，被指將用戶通訊錄轉錄至雲端伺服器，整合成數據資料庫。其他人士以成功輸入號碼，即可搜尋號碼持有人姓名，仍可查獲號碼找到其身份。涉事App至今數量已逾百個。

據《通訊社》測試，發現香港多位名人包括部分高官、中聯辦官員、立法會議員及藝人的電話號碼，已被錄存於數據庫。且Sync.Me更將手機號碼與社交帳號連結，只要有關號碼便可找到持有人的身份。Google等App，因資料與號碼名稱系統一致，例如該員與同姓的電話號碼被標為「蔡毛」，輸入陳百祥後顯示為「陳百祥」。

截來電App洩30億號碼

3個可免費下載的應用程式包括CM Security、Truecaller及Sync.Me，均被指收集用戶通訊錄，即使市民並非用戶，亦未授權個人資料予該應用程式，亦可被搜得。

綜合Truecaller及CM Security的搜尋結果，政務司司長林鄭月娥及前中聯辦主任梁振英等，新世界發展主席李兆基、康宏金融行政總裁羅德志、港航局局長張學謙、林少、汪明、陳百祥等的手機號碼，均被搜獲到姓名。

非港公司不受本地法律

Sync.Me更整合部分電話及社交媒體帳號，如立法會議員科技界議員黃乃光，搜尋他的手機號碼後，便同時出現他的Facebook、Google及LinkedIn帳戶。黃曾使用Sync.Me，而用另一程式WhatsApp，但即時已刪除，因「覺不妥當使用」。

雖有關應用程式的私隱政策，用戶使用程式時，或已同意公司收集其手機通訊錄，例如Truecaller私隱政策列明，其資料庫來源包括用戶的社交網絡和聯絡人。

來電攔截App洩30億人身份

不少手機用戶都安裝「來電攔截」應用程式，阻截不想要的電話，但未必察覺到反而因此洩露大量個人資料。據《通訊社》調查發現，「來電攔截」應用程式CM Security、Truecaller及Sync.Me，涉嫌收集用戶通訊錄並整合成數據資料庫，用戶可「搜號碼人」並搜尋號碼持有人的身份。

Users' data at risk with major apps, report claims

Mobile phone users' personal data and information is vulnerable to "misuse" and could be used for monitoring purposes by five of China's most popular mobile payment services, a news agency has reported.

Tencent's WeChat messaging app, the Alibaba Group's Taobao, Taobao World, Tmall and affiliate Alipay, which is run by Ant Financial, are all able to gain access to smartphones and collect sensitive information that could be transferred to the mainland, a FactWire investigation claimed yesterday.

The agency used programme analysis to examine how sensitive data was accessed by the apps, and tracked the information flow. It showed the apps could immediately, upon installation, obtain sensitive data that could track and identify a user, such as a smartphone's unique code and a SIM card's identification number. The data was then recorded into files that were available for transfer to mainland servers, FactWire said.

Acquiring this information would allow one to access the location of a device and track activities, such as software downloads or service visits, the agency claimed.

FactWire said it also tested Android Pay, Google Wallet and Octopus, and did not find the same results.

A Tencent spokeswoman told FactWire: "We take user data privacy and protection seriously in product development and daily operations."

"WeChat will always adhere to Tencent's core mission to create value for our users by providing high standards of user experience and information security," the spokeswoman said.

Alibaba told the agency it complied with the law in collecting, storing and using information. It added that the collection of telephone numbers and SIM card information was needed to verify a user's identity and monetary transactions to combat fraud. Alibaba is the owner of the South

用戶敏感資料傳內地 涉身份定位活動紀錄 五款支付Apps恐遭監控

防不勝防 港人近年不但愛過手機購物，更愛以支付應用程式付款。但隨時可能引發私隱危機。有報道指五款由內地公司開發的熱門網絡支付應用程式，包括WeChat、淘寶、淘寶全球、支付寶錢包及天貓，無可識別用戶身份，記錄活動及位置定位等敏感資料，更要把相關資料隨時傳送到內地的伺服器。有電腦專家指，相關敏感資料被收集後，用戶在手機的一舉一動，都可能被追蹤、監視或監控。

CCTV will be installed at black spots under a pilot scheme in the fight against the illegal dumping of rubbish.

The measure, to be launched by the end of this year, aims to curb poor hygiene conditions in areas such as back alleys close to restaurants.

Secretary for Food and Health Dr Ko Wing-man hopes the installation of closed-circuit TV will help enforce the law.

"Rubbish may not be dumped at daytime in these areas. It was reported that dumping of rubbish from homes or restaurants at inappropriate locations may happen at midnight," he said yesterday after meeting the chairmen and vice chairmen of district council food and environmental hygiene committees.

The 18 councils will be asked to identify hygiene black spots requiring further surveillance.

The pilot scheme is expected to last from six months to a year.

When asked about privacy concerns, health officials said guidelines on CCTV surveillance issued by the Office of the Privacy Commissioner would be followed.

"If the installation involves external walls of private buildings, we will seek consent from the owners' corporations or owners of the buildings before proceeding," Vivian Lau Lee-kwan, director of food and environmental hygiene, said.

六棄置垃圾黑點 食環署裝攝錄機

食環署本月三十日(下周五)起在中西區、深水埗區及元朗區共六個棄置垃圾黑點展開網絡攝錄機試驗計畫，加強監察違例棄置垃圾情況及策劃執法行動。

試驗六個月後檢討

該六個棄置垃圾黑點，包括中環士丹頓街2-4號已婚警察宿舍側巷及必列者士街(前城皇街垃圾收集站附近)；深水埗連翔道南行避車處及昌華街垃圾收集站；以及元朗東堤街垃圾收集站及十八鄉白沙村垃圾收集站，各安裝兩部網絡攝錄機。

食環署指，該些衛生黑點經常被人棄置垃圾和廢物，特別在午夜或清晨時分，引致環境衛生問題。署方已就試驗計畫徵詢相關區議會意見得到支持，六個月後作檢討。署方會根據個人資料私隱專員公署發出的「閉路電視監察措施指引」，在攝錄範圍內張貼告示，以示網絡攝錄機正運作。所有錄像只用於法律行動上需要，若違例事項在六個月內未作檢控，有關錄像將刪除。
